ANUOLUWAPO AKINGBEMILA is an enthusiast of quality education and equity, public policy and youth engagement.

She is currently the Programs Coordinator at Adara Foundation where she is responsible for the financial literacy of Adara women as well as the promotion and establishment of market access for indigenous prints they produce, using strategic approach to produce results and foster change on a larger scale. She is also a volunteer of One African Child Foundation and a Good Governance Associate of Nigeria Global Affairs Council.

She worked as a Mathematics teacher and trainer with The Lifematics Centre, a Mathematics company focused on redefining Maths in Africa for 5 years where she was privileged to work with both special needs and neurotypical children. She is an advocate of quality education and equity, with a strong belief in prioritizing quality education in Africa with the inclusion of every child, youth and adult irrespective of their differences and abilities, honing their gifts, skills and talents for the purpose of innovation, development and nation building.
